NO FEAR OF A COAL FAMINE

LOWER PRICES EXPECTED AFTER THE MIDDLE OF DECEMBER.

Wholesale Dealers Explain the Cause of the gation Closes Coal Will All Come This Way-The Effect of the Labor Troubles in the Lehigh Valley Region.

All fears of a panic in the coal market are needless. All fears of a coal famine are equally without foundation. The price of anthracite coal, to be sure, is higher now than it has been, and at wholesale is higher than it was last year, but circumstances which then did not influence the market have tended this season to send figures upward, and to set the timid dealers to thinking and predicting. What the influencing circumstances on the coal market to-day are a World reporter found after a talk with the most important wholesale dealers and direct jobbers in the city.

Primarily the strike among the miners in the Lehigh Valley, which began Sept. 10 and which is yet unsettled, started the prediction of a panic in prices, and those who believed that the country was dependent upon that region for its coal supply followed those predictions with the declaration that a coal famine was imminent.

The labor trouble in the Lehigh Valley is as far from adjustment now as it ever was, the price of coal has slowly advanced, and as a further result of this difficulty a score of days ago. firms are making no attempt to buy or sell. The former they can not do, for there is not a ton of Lehigh white ash coal being mined, and they cannot sell because there is not a firm in the city holding any appreciable quantity of that grade of coal.

Here lies the secret of the two rumors, both of which, as the season advances, will be shown to have been groundless. Indeed, the representative of one of the largest tary Lamar. houses in New York, said that within two weeks the present flurry in prices would be

A prominent wholesale dealer said: "There is neither fear of a famine in stock nor a panic in prices. On the contrary, to my mind the figures on coal will be lower before they will be higher. Of course, I mean materially higher. The price may advance a fraction, but there will be no substantial advance in the present market rates. In addition to the Lehigh Valley there are other principal regions where a large supply of the future coal will where a large supply of the future coal will come from. These regions are now sending coal to the Lake ports, but within a few weeks the Lake traffic will be closed, and then the East will offer markets for the immense supply which all season has been going westward. This alone will be sufficient for the demands of our market. Then another reason for the present high prices is that there has not been all summer and fall sufficient transportation for the products of the mines. The rallroads could not begin to handle the orders, and the coal lay in the sheds. The longer it laid the stronger grew the market, until, at the last moment, when the timid ones grew anxious, up went prices.

the market, until, at the last moment, when the timid ones grew anxious, up went prices.

"But this is only a flurry," he continued.

"The roads have attempted to meet the demands by giving extra cars and train service to the mining companies. By the middle of December I don't believe there will be any use for those extra cars. Then again, when dealers should have been buying, they remained inactive; when jobbers should have been selling they were piling up coal, and now again at the last minute all the orders come in together, slmost demoralizing the market and sending prices booming. Why talk about a coal famine? There is one concern alone outside of the Lehigh that turns out over 130,000 tons famine? There is one concern alone outside of the Lehigh that turns out over 130,000 tons a day, and there are others that all winter will turn out comparatively a large quantity. No, you need not fear a famine, and if you have not purchased your coal yet, hold off for a while and you can buy it cheaper."

The present quotations for coal for house purposes are as follows: For white ash free burning, $3.80; for broken, $4.20; for egg, $4.50; for stove, nut and pea, $3. This is for spot coal in New York at wholesale. Last year the prices were: For stove coal.

ree burning, $5.00; for broken, $2.20; for egg. $4.50; for stove, nut and pea, $3. This is for spot coal in New York at wholesale. Last year the prices were: For stove coal, $4.15; for nut, $3.65, and for egg. $3.80.

Retail dealers have long been agitating the question of an advance in prices. Last night, at a meeting of the Retail Coal Exchange, it was voted to increase prices, on and after Monday, to $6.50 for white ash stove, nut and egg and $6 for furnace, with an advance on red ash to $7 for stove and nut and $6.75 for egg. Prices to grocers and coalselers are: For stove and nut, $6.25, and to peddlers, for the same grades, $5.75. A great many members bought coal more than two months ago, and claim that, owing to the short stock, their orders could not be filled. This, as can be seen, is directly opposite the reasons given by the shippers, who claim that inadequate transportation caused the delay. Among the larger shippers, noticeably those working in the Lehigh Valley region, no quotations can be obtained. "We are out of the market," they say, " and have not followed the prices." Quotations for future delivery will not be made.

Despite the announced boycott to be begun against the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, shippers from this region have no concern regarding the result. They declare that even if the boycott be started it will amount to nothing. It is declared that the intention of the Knights of Labor in this region is to immediately boycott all corporations favoring Coxe Brothers & Co., Pardee & Co. and George B. Markle & Co. as against the striking miners in the Lehigh and Hazleton regions.

The Knights intend first to request all busi-

The Knights intend first to request all busi-

The Knights intend first to request all business men along the region from Pittston to Pottsville not to ship any more goods over the Lehigh Valley road, and those who refuse to comply, it is said, will in turn be boycotted. This will be the initial step taken by the Knights to force a settlement of the present miners' difficulty, and it is claimed that the corporations will be forced to submit to the demands of the men. Whether this result will be accomplished or not is doubtful.

At the offices of these Lehigh Valley shippers there is little alarm felt at this latest movement. Representatives of the firm of Coxe Brothers & Co. say that the boycott will amount to nothing, and claim that it is one of the final recourses of striking men everywhere. Should the boycott be placed, and the work of the Lehigh Valley road interfered with in any way, they will take legal action against the Knights. So in spite of the condition of affairs now, the magnates still maintain that there is no fear of famine or panic, and declare, too, that by the middle of December the highest price will be reached and coal figures will be going down hill again.

TRENTON'S MURDER MYSTERY.

The Victim Thought to be Mrs. Quinn-Tramp Arrested for the Murder.

ISPECIAL TO THE WORLD. I TRENTON, Nov. 19 .- A mystery has been unearthed in the cellar of an unoccupied two-story frame tenement at No. 50 Tucker street, which threatens to rival the celebrated Rahway tragedy. Late yesterday afternoon while some boys were playing around the old building one of them had occasion to go to the cellar window. Peering through the dingy glass he saw the dead body of a woman lying on the floor. Breathless with terror the boys ran to the police station and gave the alarm. Sergeant Van Horn hurried to the house, and bursting the fastenings of the door descended to the cellar. Within eighteen inches of the lower cellar step, just out from the stairway, lay the body of a woman about forty years of age. That she was foully murdered seemed apparent. Her clothing, a plain, dark dress and a rough plaid coat, were rolled over her face, which had been horribly gnawed by rats. The eyes alone were intact. The body had been lying in the cellar for two or three days. In the soft earth could be discovered the footprints of a man, and there was every evidence of a terrible death struggle. The woman appears to have been thrown to the floor, her head smashed in and cut then dragged along to the cellar stairway and hurled headlong into the dark pen below. Exactly how death was caused is still a mystery. A post mortem examination will be held to-day. The police last night arrested James McDonald, a tramp, on suspicion of being the murderer. It is said that the dead woman resembles a Mrs. Quinn, who was for some time the keeper of a cheap lodging-house here and who was released from prison a few days ago. the house, and bursting the fastenings

COLQUITT NOT FOR THE CABINET.

Senator Colquitt states that there is no truth in the rumor. He is a candidate for reelection to the Senate. "A few persons," said, "have opened fight on me in Georgia because I favored tariff reduction and was opposed to tariff reduction and was opposed to the abolition of the internal revenue system. I have accepted the issue and promise to make my contest for re-election on this very question. I am satisfied with the outlook and have no thought of going into the Cabinet." It is generally conceded by officials in the Post-Office and Interior Departments that Mr. Vilas is to succeed Mr. Lamar, and Mr. Dickinson will succeed Mr. Vilas in the Post-Office Departmens. Nothing, it is said, but the refusal of the Senate to confirm Mr. Lamar's appointment to the Supreme Bench will change this programme.

Considerable opposition to Mr. Lamar's confirmation is developing, but Lamar's friends are confident that it can be overcome. All of the Democratic Senators will probably vote for him and Mr. Lamar has many close personal friends among the older Republican Senators and his confirmation is regarded as assured.

The selection of Mr. Sparke's successor will

The selection of Mr.Sparks's successor will probably be left to Col. Vilas. Mr. Stockslager, the Acting Commissioner, has a number of friends working for his appointment.

It was at first thought that the child was dead, but when the men placed their ears to the tube, her faint cries could be heard. A weight attached to a rope was started down the pipe, and when eighty feet of it had disappeared it stopped.

A great hook was attached to the rope and lowered. The excited men fished for fully five minutes before the hook took a hold on the child. The rope started up with the child and they thought they would recover it alive, when, about thirty foot below the surface, the hook gave way and the body dropped back into its former position.

For some time the men tried to get another hold and at last succeeded, but a gentle pull brought frantic cries, and it was believed

WHILE THE FACTORY BLAZED.

THE AGED WATCHMAN FOUND COMFORT-ABLY DOSING IN THE OFFICE.

He Was in One Armehair and His Feet in Another-He Says He Was Overcome by Smoke-Flerce and Quick Flames Early This Morning in Avenue A-The Firemen

The Adler Veneer Chair-Seat Company's factory, a big four-story building at Nineteenth street and avenue A. was found to be very much on fire shortly before 5 o'clock this morning. There was nothing at all gradual about the fire's development. A burst of smoke and flame came from the rear of the first floor, and the next moment the whole building was a mass of roaring flame which drove away the early morning darkness like magic and brought the inmates of the surrounding tenements from their beds in the greatest

Sergt. Mangin, of the East Twenty-second street station, who was making the rounds at the time, first caught sight of the flames. He promptly sent out an alarm and summoned the reserves from the station-house.

The first thought of the neighbors was that man was in the burning building, a watchman about seventy-five years old, Moses Leroy by name, but better known as "Old Mose." He is quite a character in the neigh-borhood and is much liked. He was not to be seen, and it was evident that if he was still in the healding.

be seen, and it was evident that if he was still in the building he must be in great danger of his life, if not already dead.

The police were at once told of this, and Roundsman John L Langan and a few of his men battered in the front door. The roundsman made his way through the stifling smoke to the office and there found the faithful protector of the firm's interests fast saleep in an arm-chair, with his feet on another chair and a lighted lantern on the desk nearby. The flames had already attacked the wooden partition of the office, within a few feet of his slumbering form, and he would have been burned to a crisp in a very few minutes.

The police shook him roughly and bore him to the sidewalk, while he babbled querulous complaints at the outrage upon his dignity.

ulous complaints at the outrage upon his dignity.

The Adler Company manufactures pateut perforated veneer chair seats, and the materials used and the stock are very inflammable. An immense quantity of glue, shellad and varnish was nearest the point where the fire broke out and gave the flames such headway as to make fruitless the utmost efforts of the firemen, though three alarms brought to the spot eleven engines and a water-tower.

the fremen, though three alarms brought to the spot eleven engines and a water-tower. In half an hour the furious flames devoured $25,000 worth of fine wood and veneer seats in all stages of manufacture, and gutted the building so completely that nothing but the bare walls remained. The firm had recently put in special machinery which cannot be replaced within three months. A hundred workmen will be thrown out of employment for that time.

replaced within three months. A hundred workmen will be thrown out of employment for that time.

The origin of the fire cannot be guessed at. The benzine and oil used in the factory were kept in a building several blocks away, and the only fire was in the boiler-house at the extreme end of the yard. Watchman Moses Leroy was supposed to make his rounds every hour. He contends that at 4.15 o'clock he went over every floor of the building and found everything all right.

Old Mose also says he was not asleep when the policeman found him, but was overcome by the smoke. When asked the reason for keeping a watchman so old as Leroy, President Charles Adler said to a Wonld reporter:

"The old man had charge of the building years before we came into it and was known to be honest. Our experience has been that if we get a young watchman he is either a drunkard or bringing friends into the place at night. Then a young man has more wants than an old one and our valuable stock is a great temptation. Besides this is a very tough neighborhood. Old Mose knows all the toughs around here and they would not touch the place while he is in charge."

the place while he is in charge."

President Adler estimates the company's loss at $30,000, half of which is covered by insurance. William Montrose, the owner of the building, has his loss of $8,000 amply covered by insurance.

Policeman Munn, of the Eleventh Precinct, the first witness, testified that when he asked who had assaulted the dead man Downey stepped forward and acknowledged having struck him. The policeman examined the body and found a wound on his right temple. Morris Stone, a lad living in the house, said that the dead man got in a fight with another lodger, and the clerks Downey and Goetchious came on the scene. They took away the pistol that the man was flourishing, and Downey struck him a number of times with his fist. Hennessy was felled to the floor by one of the blows administered by Downey. Half an hour later witness saw the man dead. No club or other weapon was used.

BURGLARS FLUNDER TWO SAFES IN A JANE STREET FACTORY.

Stocks Valued at $12,000 and Some Mone Carried Away-The Burglars Got Into the Building Through a Window and Pried Open the Office Door-The Safe Doors Wrenched by the Force of the Explosio

John D. Hass, a tinware manufacturer of 128 Jane street, served the past two weeks on juries, and as a consequence is to-day poorer by about $12,000 in railroad bonds and $96 in cash, of which enterprising safe-breakers robbed him between 8 o'clock last night and 6 this morning.

The tinware factory occupies almost the entire block on the west side of the street and gives employment to about fifty men. It is a solid brick structure with doors without number leading from the back and front.

number leading from the back and front. The office entrance is up a narrow wooden stairway at 128, and leading from it are the workrooms lighted up with dozens of windows, none of which are very securely fastened.

The main office is divided into two small offices, one leading from the other. In the further office are the business apartments of Mr. Hass, and a massive double-locked and double-doored safe occupies the greater part of one end. In the nearer office is the deak of the superintendent, F. A. Assmann, and directly in front of that is the clerk's deak, which is built over a small, old-fashioned iron safe, in which the less important books of the concern are kept and where the money necessary for the office expenses is carefully locked away each night.

No precautions had ever been taken against possible burglars, the ordinary lock turned in the common wooden door being deemed, with the aid of the night police patrol, sufficient guard against suspicious characters.

In the large safe, with the important books of the house, Mr. Hass some time ago placed 159 shares of stock, including common and preferred St. Paul stock and shares of the Uniform Twine Company's stock. Of these 142 shares were the personal property of Mr.

Two weeks ago Mr. Hass determined to remove the certificates of stock to the Security deposit vaults, but the same day he was summoned for jury duty. Since then he has given barely an hour a day to his business on account of court work, and has never towned a chance to carry out his griginal inten-

This morning at 9 o'clock a messenger rushed up to his house on Eighty-third street and told him that during the night burglars had entered the building, broken open the two safes and stolen everything of value contained in them. Inspector Byrnes was at the same time notified and detectives were placed on the track of the things.

tained in them. Inspector hyrnes was at the same time notified and detectives were placed on the track of the thieves.

Frederic Assman, a japanner in the factory, was the first to reach his bench this morning, and when he started to the office he found the door leading thereto ajar, the look having been pried open, while inside the floor was strewn with the books and papers of the small safe. Little bits of iron and grains of powder were scattered about the floor and a single glance told him that bank breakers had been to work.

Rushing into the back office, he found that a similar condition of affairs existed. The heavy books of the company were strewn about the place, the front door of the safe was battered almost to pieces, though the inside doors were unharmed. Here, also, bits of powder showed the methods resorted to to reach the valuables. Mr. Assmann shut the doors and windows and prevented entrance to the rooms until the superintendent arrived some the sares showed that the robbery was the work of novices, probably persons who thought a large amount of cash was carried over night.

Evidences are that the burglars gained entrance to the building from one of the windows on the first story, reached the work-room and there pried open the door and reached the offices. Here they at once attacked the safes.

The small one was presumably the first worked on, and the thieves after filing off the projecting bits of iron which held the inner and outer covers, sprung them apart with a chisel, and, these open, grains of powder were scattered inside and ignited. The explosion forced the lock, smashing the combination to pieces and tearing apart the iron braces of the door.

A single strip of iron on the door, which was bent and twisted as though by some blunt instrument, showed where the work was started. The work on the larger safe was more difficult. The combination here also was broken in pieces, and the big door was torn in strips as though from an explosion, and twisted as though by a chisel.

When the valuables were found the burglars decamped and left no trace behind. Supt. Assmann thinks that the robbery was committed by some one who believed the concern drew Friday night the wages for help which are paid Saturday, and which amount to $1,200 a week.

The stolen property includes 101 shares St. Paul preferred, 36 shares St. Paul common and 5 shares of Uniform Twine Company's stock, all the possessions of John D. Hass: 6 shares St. Paul, belonging to Maria Claussen; 3 shares of St. Paul, belonging to Meta Schultz, and 2 shares St. Paul, belonging to Meta Schultz, and 2 shares St. Paul, belonging to Meta Schultz.

ISAAC SICKLE IN TROUBLE.

Several Creditors Come Down Upon Him With Attachments.

Isaac Sickle, a well-known merchant this city, is apparently in financial straits. His creditors at least have taken that view. They make charges to the effect that he has followed a plan designed to deprive them of their rights. So strong were their fears that several of them have had the merchant's property attached by the Supreme Court. Grosvenor & Carpenter, merchants, of this

Grosvenor & Carpenter, merchants, of this city, who sold and delivered to Sickle $2,721.61 worth of merchandise, have procured an attachment. They allege that Sickle has disposed of his property to defraud creditors. It is asserted that they would never have had any dealings with Sickle but for the fact that he represented that he was sound financially. He said that he had $56,000 above all liabilities.

Counsel for M. Guggenheim's Sons has also procured from Judge Donohue an atachment against Sickle's property. Their claim is for $2,208.30 for merchandise. The firm says that Sickle filed a statement with Bradstreet's agency on June 23, 1887, setting up that his assets were $72,-639.85 and his liabilities only $16,879.10.

Mr. Guggenheim says that Sickle did a business that averaged about $15,000 a month, and that he could not possibly have lost in his business in so short a time the large balance.

Another attachment has been obtained by Flectman & Co., who have a claim against Sickle for $5,744.23. Henry A. Cessar, upon a claim of $6,186.64, and H. B. Claffin, upon a claim of $1,965, have also attached Sickle's

REV. DR. SAMSON'S LEGACY.

TO BE USED IN PROMOTING MISSION WORK ABOUT NEW YORK.

One-third of the Estate of a Renuted Milllounire of Boston Appropriated for the Purpose—The Amount of the Bequest Un-certain—Dr. Samson's Energetic Work in Bible Fields Now and in the Past.

News comes from Boston to the effect that the late Ebenezer Weld, of Jamaica Plains, a reputed millionaire, has bequeathed a third of his entire estate to the Rev. Dr. George W. Samson, President of Rutgers Female College, to aid him in his work of educating men and women for evangelical mission work in this city and vicinity.

The Rev. Mr. Samson is named as executor, and the will provides that after his death what is left of the estate shall go to the and the will provides that after his death what is left of the estate shall go to the American Baptist Home Missionary Union for the benefit of the Roger Williams University at Nashville, Tenn.

Dr. Samson left for Boston last evening on receipt of the news. He told a World reporter that he thought that Mr. Weld's bequest would be found not to exceed $25,000.

Dr. Samson's career has been a long and most eventful one. Though now in his sixty-ninth year he is as active and vigorous as most men of forty, and, outside of his onerous collegiate duties, holds his own as a most energetic worker in the evangelistic mission field.

He was graduated from Harvard College when only nineteen years of age, and went thence to the Union Theological Seminary. Two years later he went to Burmah to organize a theological school for Christian converts. He was very successful, and spent the next ten years in mission work in China, Japan and India.

Returning to the United States in 1850, he directed his efforts to ameliorating the spiritual condition of the colored race. At a time when the pro-slavery feeling was strongest in the South he went through that part of the country, giving free instruction to colored aspirants for the Christian ministry.

From 1869 to 1871 he was President of the Columbia University at Washington, and was known far and wide as a powerful preacher. His knowledge of public men and national affairs for the past fifty years is unique, he having been intimately acquainted in his time with Andrew Jackson. Zachary Taylor, Lincoln, Seward, Jeff. Davis, Sam Houston and Stephen A. Douglas.

During the war he never ceased his missionary work. He passed repeatedly through the Confederate lines to make arrangements for sustaining the Southern missions founded before the outbreak of the rebellion. After the Appomatox surrender he was appointed by President Lincoln to take the oaths of allegiance of Gen. Lee and his army. In 1871 he was called to the Presidency of Butgers Female College.

HORACE WEBSTER & CO.'S FAILURE.

C. W. Lawrence Sald to Have Drawn 827, 000, Made an Assignment and Fled. Francis O. Boyd has been appointed by Judge Donohue receiver of the wholesale liquor firm of Horace Webster & Co., whose principal offices were at 22 and 24 Monroe street, Chicago, and 89 Broad street this city.

and Philadelphia.

This appointment is made upon the application of Mr. Horace Webster, who has beg a suit in the Supreme Court against his part ners, Charles W. Lawrence and Alexander Q. Howe, and the assignee, Frederick N. Lawrence. He says that on June 4, 1886, he formed a limited copartnership with Lawrence and Howe for three years. He remained in San Francisco and relied implicitly upon his partners to continue the business properly. He valued his interest in the firm at $100,000.

On Sept. 30 last Charles W. Lawrence made an assignment in the name of the firm to Frederick N. Lawrence. Mr. Webster says that this was a great surprise to him, as he believed the concern to be sound. Immediately he started for this city. He engaged an expert accountant, who went over the firm's books and discovered that on the day before the assignment Charles W. Laurence drew over $27,000 of the funds of the firm. Mr. Webster learned that Lawrence salled for Europe on Nov. 17. The surprised Californian began proceedings immediately.

He asserts that the assignment was not made in good faith, but for the purpose of defrauding creditors.
